

Ideas Of Le Corbusier On Architecture And Urban Planning

These plans are all to the same scale, and give the dimensions of various sites built over and of streets in the fourteenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries (Gothic, Louis XV, Napoleon III). In the centre is a suggestion for a modern site, densely populated, i.e. a sky-scraper of sixty storeys (5 per cent. of the surface built upon, 95 per cent. planted over). Also a housing scheme with "set-backs" (15 per cent. of the surface built upon, 85 per cent. planted over; no internal courtyards, and immense open spaces).
